H.H. Sheikh Hamdan bin
Zayed Bin Sultan Al Nahyan

HH Sheikh Hamdan bin Zayed Bin Sultan Al Nahyan is Abu Dhabi's ruler's representative in the Al Dhafra Region, making him the most influential figure directing government policy in Al Dhafra. He is the Chairman of the Environment Agency – Abu Dhabi and Chairman of the UAE Red Crescent. Sheikh Hamdan is the son of the late H.H. Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan Al Nahyan, founding father and first President of the United Arab Emirates.

In an interview with Oxford Business Group, Sheikh Hamdan was asked “How can Al Dhafra best leverage tourism as an economic contributor?”. Sheikh Hamdan's answer was,

“Tourism is a booming industry in the emirate, and Al Dhafra offers a wide range of opportunities in its development due to its natural and historical assets. Al Dhafra is nature's beautiful gift; it is where the desert meets the sea. It is home to the historic oasis town of Liwa, which is situated at the mouth of a large desert known as the Empty Quarter. In pursual of further success, we have also rebranded the region to reflect its rich cultural history. Now known by its ancient name of Al Dhafra, we can promote our great heritage and highlight our distinctive history. This will also raise awareness of our traditional values and culture, which we view as essential for the prosperity, happiness and success of future generations.”

a. Al Dhafra Fort

Al Dhafra Fort is the gateway to Al Dhafra, the largest region in Abu Dhabi, which encompasses some of the emirate's most significant forts and cultural sites

Built in 2017, Al Dhafra Fort embodies Abu Dhabi's fortification architecture and sits in proximity to the historical site of Hosn Al Sirra, approximately 30 km east of Madinat Zayed.

Al Dhafra forts and defensive buildings are an essential part of the regional tangible heritage. The historic buildings erected from the 19th century, or earlier for some of them, form a coherent defensive belt defending the water access and the tribes against their enemies. These landmarks share common architectural features and are visible testimonies of the tribal lifestyle at that time that are worth to be preserved.

The Al Dhafra Fort itself is thus a living monument and memorial to the history of Al Dhafra and the defensive architecture of the region.

Visitors to the fort are invited to tour the exhibition space that tells the story of Al Dhafra, the customs and way of life the desert nature of the land gave rise to, and the values its people still hold to this very day.

b.Qasr Al Sarab Desert Resort by Anantara

The Qasr Al Sarab Desert Resort is a luxury, five-star destination which can be found in an isolated spot in the Liwa area. It is on the edge of the Rub' Al Khali or Empty Quarter Desert which has the biggest sand mass in the world and is an area that has been used as a location for recent Star Wars films. The resort is in the Al Dhafra region of Abu Dhabi, approximately 200 kilometres and two hours' drive from Abu Dhabi city.

Sometimes known as The Mirage Palace, its overall design resembles a sandcastle, but the separate Royal Pavilion Villas are more like palaces, with private pools and a butler service.

The Resort offers a range of facilities including:

- Anantara Asian and Arabic spa
- fitness centre
- tennis court
- swimming pool
- kids' club
- business centre
- library

The hotel has several restaurants, including Al Waha for international food, and Suhail, a seafood restaurant.

The Resort's construction costs had to include the running of power and water supplies from Abu Dhabi city as it is so remote. It was designed to look like a desert fort (Qasr) with turrets, torches and palm-lined courtyards. The luxurious interiors feature desert and earthy colours with soft furnishings made with local fabrics, giving it a very Middle Eastern atmosphere. Guest rooms have balconies overlooking the spectacular sand dunes.

There is a huge range of desert activities to enjoy, including camel trekking, dune bashing (off-roading on sand dunes), desert fat biking (riding bicycles with thick tyres across sand dunes), horse riding, campfire barbecues, full moon experiences, archery and many others. For the less adventurous, there are tours of Liwa city, dawn walks, desert yoga and, in the winter months, falconry and saluki shows.

Since opening, the resort has won numerous awards including United Arab Emirates' Leading Desert Resort and the Middle East's Leading Desert Resort, three times each.

d.Sir Bani Yas Church & Monastery

Buried for centuries, a church and monastery discovered in the early 1990s on Sir Bani Yas Island illuminate the evidence of early Christianity in the region. Open to the public, this is the UAE's only known ancient Christian site.

A church, a monastery and a series of courtyard houses, dating to the 7th and 8th centuries CE, were discovered at the site. The church was identified by the presence of plaster crosses and its plan, which resembles ancient churches known from elsewhere in the Arabian Gulf.

Hundreds of artefacts found at the site reveal that the people there used the sea for food and also kept cattle, sheep and goats. Glass and ceramic objects indicate that the inhabitants of the settlement traded widely across the Arabian Gulf and into the Indian Ocean, now, almost two decades since its discovery, and more than a thousand years since it was built, the public can visit the Sir Bani Yas Church & Monastery.

Guests can experience a range of desert activities, making it an exceptional destination for relaxation and adventure in the UAE's vast dunes.

f. Dalma Island

Dalma, which lies 26 miles off the coast of the Western Region of Abu Dhabi, is one of the oldest inhabited islands in the area, with archaeologists finding evidence of human life dating back a whopping 10,000 years. The island's abundant supplies of fresh water, as well as the numerous date plantations, sustained the local population throughout the years, but these days there's a small town with various shops and a mall. The Dalma Museum is worth a visit, playing host to numerous interesting artefacts found on the isle. Dalma has been designated by the government as a potential tourist destination, with hotels and other facilities proposed to be constructed there in the future.

To visit the island of Dalma, you can go by road to Jebel Dhanna (Ruwais road from Abu Dhabi). At Jebel Dhanna is the port of the Doh (the ship that carries passengers and cars to the island of Dalma), where a ferry operates between 7am and 7pm. There are non-scheduled flights, (almost every day except Friday) from Abu Dhabi International Airport to the island.

1.2 Sustainable Tourist Attractions

a. Arabian Wildlife Park

The Arabian Wildlife Park is located on Sir Bani Yas Island, in the Al Dhafra region of Abu Dhabi. It is 250km from Abu Dhabi City and takes two and a half hours to drive, followed by a ferry crossing from the jetty.

The wildlife park covers more than half of the island and extends to 1,400 hectares. It was established in 1971 by the late Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan Al Nahyan who had a desire to protect endangered species and preserve the island's plants and animals. Today, the park has grown into a wildlife sanctuary for over 10,000 free-roaming animals.

The focus of the park is to create a fully functioning ecosystem for the animals and birds, which is as close to what happens in the wild as possible. It is now home to many species, both those native to the island and endangered species which have been introduced to the area. These include the Arabian rock hyrax, the beisa oryx, ostriches, giraffes and striped hyenas. Cheetahs have been introduced to the island to provide an additional predator in order to control the park's animal population naturally.

Visitors have a choice of staying at one of the hotels or villas on the island and can enjoy activities such as:

- Nature and wildlife drives in 4x4 vehicles with the island's expert guides.
- Horse riding on Arabian horses from the reserve's own paddocks.
- Mountain biking – a blue route for a scenic gentle ride and a purple route for a more dramatic and strenuous ride.
- Land sailing in a wheeled vehicle powered by wind through the use of a sail.
- Culture and history tours.
- Nature walks with tour guides.
- Falconry.
- Archery.
- Snorkelling.
- Visiting one of the island's 42 archaeological sites that have been uncovered.

Visitors should contact the island to book activities.

b. Animal breeding, rehabilitation and relocation

There are some endangered and almost extinct species that the park's conservationists and vets breed and rehabilitate with extraordinary success.

The striped hyenas were first introduced to the island as a natural form of population control. This species is classed as vulnerable worldwide and extinct in the UAE by the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN). The first pair of hyenas successfully bred and have their own family. They now scavenge and hunt for themselves and do not require feeding. This process is known as 're-wilding'.

The northern cheetah is also classed as vulnerable worldwide and completely extinct throughout the UAE by the IUCN. Male and female cheetahs were introduced to the island, and like the hyenas, they have successfully bred and have their own families. They now hunt and feed themselves and can be seen chasing prey around the park. This is another example of a successful 're-wilding'.

In the early 1970s the Arabian oryx was extinct in the wild in the UAE. The founder of the park, Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan Al Nahyan, wished to ensure its survival and arranged to have three female and two male oryx from Al Ain Zoo placed on the island. The plan was successful, and visitors can now see around 500 Arabian oryx roaming freely around the reserve. This has enabled the Arabian oryx to be re-introduced in the wild in the Umm al Zumul region of Abu Dhabi.

The Arabian tahr is a small, stout mammal resembling a goat. They are found in the Hajar Mountains on the border of the UAE and Oman but are classified as endangered by the IUCN. The park is therefore undertaking a captive breeding programme to ensure the survival of the species. Currently, the animals are living in a specially constructed area that looks and feels like their natural habitat. They will then be moved to a larger habitat so that visitors can learn more about them and will finally be moved to an even bigger enclosure so they can adjust and re-wild under supervision. Once this has been done, they will be released into the wild under the supervision and direction of the island's specialist staff.

DID YOU KNOW?

Breeding of the Arabian Oryx has been so successful that visitors can see over half the world's remaining population now roaming freely on Sir Bani Yas Island.

c.Al Marzoom Hunting Reserve

The hunting reserve is located at the heart of Al Dhafra region, an hour's drive from Abu Dhabi City. The reserve is a natural sanctuary which offers a unique experience for falcon lovers, with visitors able to try traditional hunting with falcons. It is considered the first reserve in the world to offer the experience of hunting Houbara bustards using traditional methods.

The initiative focuses on assuring the sustainability of desert wildlife and a respect for nature, while also allowing for a pleasurable and legal hunting experience inside the UAE. Abu Dhabi has been enforcing very strict rules for hunting, and because falconry is considered one of the main elements of national heritage, the government established seasonality for this practise. The reserve is aiming to maintain Emirati identity and traditional sports, and to turn the reserve into a living museum where visitors experience the tradition of hunting.

The Al Marzoom Hunting Reserve receives falconry lovers during the hunting season from November to February, and it operates seven days a week, with two hunting trips daily (morning and evening). Visitors form groups of five and are accompanied by an expert hunter. Camels are used as transportation along with safari vehicles inside the reserve, which has a vast area of 923km<sup>2</sup>. Visitors can be assisted by the expert hunter to hunt rabbits and Houbara using falcons only. After that, visitors can enjoy a memorable stay in the camps in the middle of the desert.

The fees paid for this unique experience are used to support the conservation programmes that take care of the Houbara, rabbits, and other species in the desert.

- Entry fees: AED 1050
- Hunting fees (includes preparation of the hunting sites, preys and the accompanying hunter): AED 1050
- Safari vehicle rent: AED 1575
